New Insights for the Brazilian Journal of Dentistry

Due to the COVID-19 pandemia, many dental journals are rethinking the way they interact with authors. New perspectives regarding a change in as for the creation of preprint repositories and the extension of the peer review period were used to streamline and maintain the excellence of the published manuscripts.

The Brazilian Journal of Dentistry, even with an atypical year, followed with its publication flow and ended the year with dozens of publications. Among them, contents related to COVID-19.

We believe that the publication of science is the key to evolve more and more! We experienced this by publishing in this period of great uncertainty in 2020, through the launch of manuscripts in the preprints repository the dynamic and effective concern to inform with consistency. Bringing quality content to our readers seeking updates from the world of biomedical science is our highest goal. 2020 was a year of much learning, especially based on science.

With the genuine work of the various authors, members of our editorial board, our associate editors hope to build a journal with more consistency and always focused on the good practices of scientific publications.

We ensure that we will continue to work very hard to keep the high quality of our journal.
